Marc Leone joined the Graham Company in 2016 and is responsible for new business development. As National Accounts Sales Leader, Leone focuses on business development across all of the firm's industry sectors with a specific focus on large organizations (both public and private) with complex operations and risk profiles. Leone also specializes in Controlled Insurance Programs for large-scale construction projects. Leone assists "C-Level" professionals focused on protecting the assets of their companies by assisting them in designing and implementing comprehensive, cost-effective insurance programs and risk management strategies.

Prior to joining the Graham Company, Leone was a corporate attorney with the Amlaw 10 international law firm, Morgan, Lewis & Bockius LLP. During that time, Leone's practice focused on Mergers & Acquisitions and Executive Compensation and Benefits. Leone represented clients across all industry sectors, with international and domestic exposures, ranging from emerging growth businesses to Fortune 100 companies.

Leone earned his Bachelors of Science degree in Economics from the Johns Hopkins University with a minor focus in Entrepreneurship and Management. While at the Johns Hopkins University, Leone was a member of the Men's Varsity Basketball team. In 2008, Leone received his Juris Doctorate from the Villanova School of Law. While in law school, Leone was a member of the Villanova Law Review where he served as an Associate Editor and was nominated into the Villanova Chapter for the Order of the Coif. Leone is currently admitted to practice law in Pennsylvania.
