Carl Bloomfield is the President and Chief Operating Officer at Graham, where he oversees strategic initiatives and daily operations. With a background in risk management and leadership, Carl has played key roles in various divisions within the company. Starting as a Producer in 2006, he advanced to co-chair of Graham's Construction Division, handling insurance premiums exceeding $150 million and serving contractors of all types.

Transitioning to lead the Health & Human Services Division, Carl managed outsourced risk for organizations with combined annual budgets over $20 billion. His expertise spans healthcare, aging services, behavioral health and social service organizations. In his next role, Carl started and led Graham's Enterprise Risk and Advisory Services Division, delivering comprehensive consulting services such as Enterprise Risk, Human Capital Management, Cybersecurity, and Business Continuity. Carl also managed Graham's New York office.

Before Graham, Carl held pivotal positions at Aramark Uniform Services and Cardinal Health, where he managed the largest distribution center in the country, generating $7 billion annually for Cardinal. Carl is a published author on risk management topics and actively contributes to non-profit organizations. He serves as board President of Parent's Inc. of New Jersey and sits on the board of InspiriTec, aiding disadvantaged individuals, including disabled veterans.

Carl holds a Bachelor of Science Degree in Civil Engineering from the United States Military Academy at West Point and is an Accredited Advisor of Insurance. As President and COO, he drives Graham's strategic growth, ensuring operational excellence and innovation. Carl Bloomfield's leadership shapes Graham's future, fostering success in risk management and consulting services.
